

Floral Bouquet Preservation

Pricing listed below assumes that you have already dried out your own flowers. We will provide detailed instructions on how to best dry out flowers in both 3D and flat-pressed formats.

Customers in Israel: Deliver flowers to my studio at Nachal Micha 2/2, Bet Shemesh.

Customers outside of Israel: Once you have dried out your flowers, you will receive a pre-paid shipping label and specific instructions for how to package and ship your dried flowers to us in Israel. Once your preservation is complete, we will mail your artwork back to you. There is an additional 350 shekel charge to cover shipping costs to and from Israel.

For all customers: If you'd like us to dry out your flowers on your behalf, there is an additional 200 shekel service fee.

Wedding glass can be incorporated into the preservations as well!

If you prefer, We can provide the flowers for you,. You'll let us know the types and colors of flowers you'd like, and we'll source, dry, and preserve them to create the artwork. Email us for pricing.

Instructions for drying out flowers

Make sure to dry out your flowers completely before preserving them in resin.

Two methods and options:

1.) Flat press your flowers between newspaper or paper towels and place under heavy books. Leave for 1 week, changing the paper DAILY. This will result in flat flowers that can be encased in a shallow depth of resin (see 1.25 cm depth projects in catalog)

2.) Dry out the flowers in their 3D format by pouring silica gel over them in a closed container. Leave for up to 3 weeks, depending on the type of flower. Once dried, remove silica gel by shaking it off from the flowers. These flowers will look like their original 3D shape and are great for deeper resin pours (see options in the catalog for 3.75 cm depth).

*Note, for flowers with multiple layers, like roses, make sure to first peel back the layers and open up the flower so that the silica gel will reach the inner crevices of the flower petals.
